NORTHERN IRELAND

FOREWORD

The ADBA Northern Ireland Forum will present the inside track on the role anaerobic digestion and biogas must play in the province's ambitious decarbonisation strategy. A recent study conducted by Queen's University Belfast concluded that biogas could meet 80% of the province's natural gas demand.

ADBA's half-day conference will consider routes to market, revenue streams, nutrient management and emerging policy and regulation, within the framework of NI's drive to net zero. Participants in this in-person event will receive the latest intelligence on the key drivers behind market development, from government, agri-food and farming sectors and industry. They will learn about technical innovations that could increase revenues and put businesses on a sustainable path to net zero.

If you're exploring the potential of biogas to decarbonise your processes we encourage you to come along to network with your peers and gain insight into the regenerative power of biogas.
